About this training course

Humanitarian organisations are operating in increasingly complex environments, facing growing crises, funding constraints, higher accountability requirements and a shrinking operating space. In this context, decisions made by field leaders can have significant strategic consequences.
This programme enables experienced humanitarian managers to strengthen their ability to analyse complex situations, set priorities, mobilise resources and lead teams and organisations in challenging and changing environments.

- Strengthen your ability to analyse, make strategic decisions and lead humanitarian strategies in complex and changing environments.
- Analyse complex environments, stakeholders and risks to inform strategic decision-making.
- Define strategic priorities and develop an appropriate operating model for your organisation.
- Mobilise and diversify resources, develop partnerships and strengthen your organisation's influence.
- Negotiate humanitarian access, arbitrate between competing priorities and represent your organisation in high-stakes situations.
- Lead teams and support organisational change while implementing a shared strategic direction.
